Developing foundation

Generated September 11, 2026

Your business at a glance

Your business has useful building blocks, but they are not yet equally established or consistently connected. Prioritizing a few foundational improvements will create more visibility, clearer ownership, and steadier execution.

CATEGORY SCORECARD

YOUR 6-12 MONTH GOAL

Clear ownership and responsibilities. Opportunities for growth.

Your operating foundation

Each score reflects the practices you reported in that area. Use the interpretations to protect strengths and clarify what needs attention next.

Financial Health

45/100

Important gaps in this area may be creating avoidable uncertainty, rework, or risk. Stabilize the most essential practice first, then build consistency one step at a time.

Customers & Revenue

75/100

This area has a strong foundation. A few targeted improvements could make it more consistent, easier to maintain, and better connected to recurring decisions.

Processes & Workflows

25/100

This area needs foundational attention. Begin with basic visibility, a clearly assigned owner, and one simple repeatable process before adding more complexity.

People & Accountability

50/100

Useful practices are in place, but they may be incomplete or inconsistently applied. Clarifying ownership and establishing a repeatable review rhythm are likely to produce meaningful gains.

Reporting & KPIs

75/100

This area has a strong foundation. A few targeted improvements could make it more consistent, easier to maintain, and better connected to recurring decisions.

Tools, Systems & Data

100/100

This area is a clear operating strength. The underlying practices appear dependable, visible, and measured. Protect the routines that make this possible and watch for new strain as the business changes.

Strategy & Growth

100/100

This area is a clear operating strength. The underlying practices appear dependable, visible, and measured. Protect the routines that make this possible and watch for new strain as the business changes.

Your first two priority areas

Work through these in order. Begin with one manageable action rather than attempting to solve an entire category at once.

1

Processes & Workflows | 25/100

Document one critical workflow

Choose the recurring process creating the most delay or inconsistency and capture its steps, owner, handoffs, and approvals.

Why: Starting with one high-impact workflow creates useful clarity without turning documentation into a massive

Identify the costliest bottleneck

Track where work waits, repeats, gets dropped, or requires rework, then estimate its operational impact.

Why: A defined bottleneck gives improvement work a clear target.

Create a process-review rhythm

Assign a process owner and schedule a simple recurring review of performance, exceptions, and changes.

Why: Processes stay useful only when someone owns and improves them.

2

Financial Health | 45/100

Create one dependable financial view

Bring revenue, expenses, cash position, and profitability into one recurring monthly review.

Why: A shared financial view makes problems visible early and gives planning a reliable starting point.

Establish a practical budget cadence

Document a working budget, assign an owner, and compare actual results with the plan every month.

Why: Consistent budget review turns financial information into decisions instead of a backward-looking record.

Build a rolling cash forecast

Project expected cash inflows and outflows for at least the next 8–12 weeks and update it regularly.

Why: Short-range forecasting can reveal timing risks before they become urgent.

3

People & Accountability | 50/100

Clarify ownership and authority

Document who owns key outcomes, which decisions they can make, and where approval is required.

Why: Clear accountability reduces delays, duplicated work, and dropped commitments.

Make priorities measurable

Translate current business priorities into a small set of role- or team-level expectations with owners and due dates.

Why: People can follow through more consistently when success is concrete.

ACTION 3

Reduce single-person dependency

Identify critical knowledge held by one person and document or cross-train the highest-risk responsibilities first.

Why: Knowledge concentration creates continuity and capacity risk.

YOUR FIRST 30 DAYS

WEEK 1

Confirm the starting point

Review the first priority with the people closest to the work. Confirm what is accurate and assign an owner.

WEEK 2

Complete one action

Implement the first recommendation for Processes & Workflows. Keep the scope manageable.

WEEK 3

Create visibility

Choose one measure, checkpoint, or review cadence that shows whether the change is being used.

WEEK 4

Review and choose next

Document what changed, then continue the first priority or move to Financial Health.

RECOMMENDED NEXT STEP

Choose the level of support that fits the problem

These are independent options, not required stages. Based on the pattern across your assessment results, Improve One Process is the strongest fit; the other options may be appropriate for a different scope or level of ongoing support.
